Soul of mountaineering

Once again this year, on the day dedicated to mountain culture and environment, the cross-border collaboration between the Kiku. International Mountain Summit in Bressanone/Brixen (BZ), the University of Insubria (Como/Varese-Italy), the Institute of Mountain Emergency Medicine/EURAC in Bolzano as well as the organizers of the International Master in Mountain Medicine will be presented. The goal of this Master is to educate and train people to become expedition doctors capable of setting up a practice in the mountains. These doctors will become an integral part of the Alpine and expedition world. Their career profile will be such that he/she will be familiar with all aspects of the mountain world so as to be able to interpret those aspects with an increased awareness and a deeper knowledge, thereby increasing safety in the mountains.

Working together with IMS friends, the idea of opening the didactical part of the Masters to the public, as a common good, came into being. On October 17th, during the morning session, some of the most famous writers, journalists, photographers, and naturalists from Italy and abroad will present some never before discussed aspects of alpine history with the help of new means of communication. For example, it will be explained how we can immortalize our experience in a photograph, and how we can interpret the mountain flora. At the same time, as passionate lovers of the mountains, our souls will open up, catching glimpses of unknown beauty and fascination.

At the end, we will have come full-circle, returning to the topic of mountain medicine. Friends from Spain will present for the first time in Italy, the experience gained in Nepal regarding expedition-related medicine.
